Autoethnography is a form of qualitative research in which an author uses self-reflection and writing to explore anecdotal and personal experience and connect this autobiographical story to wider cultural, political, and social meanings and understandings.

Autoethnography is a self-reflective form of writing used across various disciplines such as communication studies, performance studies ...

Autoethnography - Wikipedia

Autoethnography is typically defined as an approach to research that puts the self at the center of cultural analysis.

Chang (2008) asserts that autoethnography “transcends mere narration of self to engage in cultural analysis and interpretation” (p. 43).

“Triangulation” is a term that is frequently mentioned in publications of qualitative studies. Typically, scholars mention “triangulation” in discussions to do with how the “quality” or “validity” of a study might be assured (e.g., Seale, 1999; Tracy, 2010). Where did the term “triangulation” come from, and how did it come to be used in qualitative...

Data Display in Qualitative Research - SAGE Journals

Autoethnography is a relatively new qualitative research method that is generating a great deal of interest. It is based in ethnography, meaning that it, too, is an attempt to understand and describe the insiders' cultural perspectives—i.e., how insiders construct their world view/culture.

Chapter 5: Qualitative Data (Part 2) | Research Methods

Ethnography is a qualitative research design in which the unit of analysis is typically greater than 20 participants and focuses on an “entire culture-sharing group.” (Harris, 1968). In this approach, the “research describes and interprets the shared and learned patterns of values, behaviors, beliefs, and language” of the group.
