you wonder what is so bad about eating a banana or a single slice of bread? After all, aren't bananas listed on the basic food groups as necessary—that was a part of our elementary school education, right? When and how did we become so afraid to eat that we blame certain foods as the culprits for our bigger problem which is being overweight?

Teddy Ruxpin is an animatronic children's toy in the form of a talking 'lillop', a creature which looks like a bear. The creature's mouth and eyes move while "reading" stories played on an audio tape cassette deck built into its back. It was created by Ken Fosse with later assistance by Larry Larsen and John Davies, and the first version of the toy was designed by the firm RKS Design.
